Loppy Met His Vats With Great Portltude - Made No Resistance But Placed Rimself Voluntarity in the Death Chair -The Precautions Used to Prevent the Naws From Being Known-History of the Crime for Which the Murderer Suffered.

Sinc Sinc, N. Y., Dec. S .- The scenes at the execution by slectricity of Martin D. Loppy, the New York wifemurderer, in Sing Sing prison yesterday were repetition of those which occurred at the execution of the four murderers in the same place in July last. The condomned met his fate bravely. Three shocks were administered, and Loppy was pronounced dead in six minutes after he was placed in the chair. Voltage used in this instance was from 1,700 to used in this instance was from 1,700 to 1,750 as against 1,500 used in July. The total period of contact was from 40 1-2 to 50 1-3 seconds, the difference being caused by variation of the battery. The first shock was admistered at one minute to 12 and at 12:05 the warden ordered one of the guards to run up the flag pronouncing to the outside world that the tragic event had been accommissed.

The witnesses were Dr. Carlos F. McDonald, State Commissioner of Lunacy; Prof. Louis A. Laudy, of Columbia College; Dr. Samuel B. Ward, of Albany;
E. A. Brown, State Prison Purchasing Agent; Rev. Sidney G. Law, Chaplain of the Tombs; Rev. Silas W. Edgerton, Chaplain of Sing Sing Prison; Deputy Coroner W. P. Jenkins, of New York;
Dr. Ira T. Vau Geissen, of Greenport,
L. L. Dr. Brill, of Brooklyu; E. F. Davis, of New York; Dr. Evans, of Schnyler;
Dr. W. F. Douglass, of Middietown;
Dr. J. E. Ransom, of Dannemora Prison; Dr. Holliston, of Beilevue Hospital, New York; Dr. Hiram Bariow, of Sing Sing; M. G. Ellison, Dr. Kingston, of Newburg, and Dr. Ely, of Newburg.
A little after 10 o'clook Rev. Mr. Law and Rev. Mr. Edgerton went to Lyppy's cell and spent the bour and a half between that time and the execution in preparing him for the ordeal they knew he was to meet.

Meanwhite the warden hal assembled the witnesses in the prison parlor and at 15 minutes of 12 they marched in double file, headed by the warden, through the passageway to the death chamber.

Headkeeper McNaughton and two deputies then entered Loppy's cell and conducted him to the death chamber. He placed himself in the chair voluntarily. The straps about this legs, chest, abdomen and the arms were quickly adjusted; this cap containing the electrodes for the temples was lowered and placed in position, the death mask drawn over the face, and the guards stepped back and left him alone.

Dr. McDonald gave the signals. Electrician Davis closed the switch and Loppy had paid the penalty of his crime.

The autopsy by Deputy Coroner Jenkins showed that, as in all former killings by electricity, the blood was in a fluid state all through the body. Both vetricles of the heart were filled with blood, and the color was slightly dirker than in normal cases. The splesh was pulpy and colored in spots and slightly enlarged. The pupil of the eye was noticeably contracted.

The other was discolored. The skin along the back of the body was also discolored, slightly purple, and in spots were found a number of blisters. The legs were contracted and the muscles rigid. Marked evidences of burning were found on the call of the legs, and over the temples the flesh was seared nearly to the bone. Loppy was burned as badly as was the first under the new method of killing.

Four hours later four convicts removed the body of Loppy from the autopsy table and placed it in a rough wooden box, half filled with quicklime. Then they filled it with the same material, nalled on the top and hauled it to the lonely trench on the hillside, where they buried it. No friends or relatives have ever inquired for Loppy since his incarceration.

relatives have ever inquired to Loppy since his incarceration.

Soon after midnight yesterday the scenes around the old prison assumed an appearance similar to those during the execution of Slocum. Smiler and the others. A number of newspaper men had taken possession of the hill opposite the prison, and kept themselves busy trying to interrupt and pump information from those who entered or came out of the jail. The death line was closely patrolled and the guards, carrying guns loaded with corks, had orders to "pop" any one who persisted in crossing the line without permission.

When day light began to show the outlines of the prison walls to the waiting press representatives, rain was ing press representatives, rain was pouring steadily and the surroundings were dismal enough to form a suitable frame for the approaching death scene. At 7 o'clock the electric lights in the prison and in the villa also were turned off and the engineer of the special engine went home, so that the indications were that nothing was to be done during the carly morning hours.

Chief Keeper Connaughton came outside the dead line at about 8 o'clock and said the prisoner had passed a very comfortable night, resting quietly and that he ate his breakfast with quite a conductor mile.

The execution room is in a temporary frame structure built on the south side of the main building of the prison. There are two rooms in the little building—one the execution room and the other the room where the autopsy is held. The execution room is in the eastern half of the building. Against the partition which divides the building is built a closer for the executioner. He enters it from the autopsy room.

The quiet prison life and the coarse healthy prison fare restored some of his vitality and cleared his besetted mind. Of late he found some consolation in religion, and Mr. Law, the chaplain of the Tombs, hearing from the prison chaplain, Mr. Edgerton, of his interest in re-

His Body Filled With Bullets, and His Head Chopped Off.

The Slaver Would Have Committed Suleide, But the Thought of His Mother Stayed His Hand-Never Made Cp His Mind to Do Marder-The Rody Found In Maine, Which May Save Sawtelle from the Gallows, Concome, N. H., Dec. 8 .- The hearing in the petition for a new trial in the case of Isaac B. Sawtelle, under sentence of death for murdering his brother Hiram, at Rochester, N. H., was held before the full bench of the Su-preme Court in the Senste chamber yes terday. The hall and corridors leading to it were througed. Sawtelle, in charge of Warden Coibath and manacied to prison officials, came into court and told the following story of the murder: "I met my brother Hiram on Febru ary 5, 1890, at Rochester when he got off the train. I told him his daughter Marion was sick. I told him site was out of town. I got a team at Smart's stable, and went from there to Wallace's hardware store where I got a spade, pick and shovel, and asked if they would take back the tools if they were not used. They said they would. I did up the tools and put them in the back of the wagon.

he did. Then he got in again. I said, I have got some papers here that I want you to sign. I took the papers from my pocket and said. 'You may sign these or take that,' pulling out a revolver and politing it at him.

'He held my hand in which the revolver was until after I promised not to hurt him. He then began to walk toward the shanty, and after going some 20 feet broke into a run. I started after him and called several times, 'Hiram! Hiram! atop, or I will fire!' As he kept on running I fired. He ran a little way and feil. I then ran up and shook him, but he said nothing. I then put the pistol to my head to kill myself and said: 'Good-by, Hiram, I'm going to shoot.' Immediately I said: 'My God! There a my poor old mother, I must live for her!'

"I lowe of the pistol, and as I thought Hiram was moving I fired three more shots into his body to put him out of pain. I then took hold of the boots and dragged the body about 100 yards and began digging a grave. I hurried up and took off his clothing. The grave I dug was not large enough, and I took the hatchet and chopped off his head and arms. I found I had not buried the head, and I took it and put it in the bag with his shirt around it, put the bag in the team, and flually drove into the woods and buried the head under some birch trees, I dug a hole, took the head out of the bag, and, as I buried it, said, 'good-by, Hiram.' I threw the axe, lamp and shovel into the river as I orossed the river from Mains back to Rochester, took Hiram's clothing to my boarding house and wont to bed.

"Dr. Blood gave me a plan of the woods and the vacant shanty in Maine, and I went over there from Rochester on Tuesday to locate them. 2Dr. Blood said it would be just the way to go up to Rochester and take mother and Marion with me and send for Hiram. He also spoke about the vacant house. I never mide up up in into the shanty and
